ORQUÍDEAS

Shaped to be felt

Orquídeas is not a flower. It is a presence.
Revealed through light, shaped through form.

Orquídeas is rooted in the idea that jewelry is not meant to replicate nature, but to reinterpret it. Familiar forms are reworked to take on a new presence, more defined, more controlled.

The collection draws from one of Carrera y Carrera's iconic creations, the Gold, Rubies and diamonds masterpiece, revisited here through a contemporary expression.

Drawn from the house's Imperial Silk legacy, the collection revisits a language of movement and detail once expressed through embroidery. Here, it is translated into 18K gold, where each surface is refined with precision.

At its center, the orchid. Long associated with rarity and transformation, it is approached here not as a symbol, but as a structure. Balanced, precise, almost architectural, it becomes a study of proportion rather than representation. At its heart, the pistil becomes a point of light, set with diamonds.

Each piece begins with a formed base, establishing its structure. From there, the hand refines and polishes each surface through successive stages, adjusting balance and proportion. This work culminates in LIGHTLINE™, where matte and polished gold interact to create contrast, depth, and tension. Light is not added, but revealed, allowing each petal to gain volume and a distinctive sense of realism.

The result is deliberate. Composed. Controlled.

Orquídeas reflects a shift in how jewelry is chosen today, less for what it represents, more for how it defines the wearer. Pieces that hold their presence, whether worn as a statement or integrated into a more understated silhouette.

Each creation carries the precision of the hand, brought to its final expression through balance, proportion, and light.

Carrera y Carrera is a historic jewelry house founded in Madrid in 1885, renowned for its sculptural approach to gold and its distinctive design language. Worn in royal courts across the world, its creations carry a legacy of prestige that continues to evolve today.

For more than 140 years, the house has remained closely connected to its founding family, preserving a singular artistic vision shaped by continuity and time.

Each creation is conceived in 18K gold, where depth, volume, and contrast define the form. A mastery of gold shaping gives each piece its presence, while carefully selected gemstones bring intensity and character, reflecting the house's origins in high jewelry.

At the core of its savoir-faire is LIGHTLINE™, a proprietary technique where matte and polished gold interact to reveal light and texture. Each piece is brought to life in Spain by master artisans, guided by precision, patience, and a pursuit of timelessness.

Carrera y Carrera continues to expand its international presence through a curated network of boutiques and partners, affirming its position as a house where heritage and modern expression coexist with clarity and purpose.
